EDITOR'S NOTE

Wishing Happy Independence Day to all. Independence finds its expression in terms of economic, social and political freedoms. Nobel- laureate Amratya Sen talked about 'Development as Freedom' where he tries to establish the relation between development and freedom. Freedom is the basic ingredient of development in itself and the licence for other kinds of freedoms. In the era of globalization, it is very much difficult but essential to save the socio-political-economic freedoms. The people and the government must find out the ways and means to face this challenge. Patriotism needs to be refined in terms of one's social, cultural, ethical, religious, economic and political responsibility and freedom. 'Swadeshi', to be more appropriate 'economic patriotism' is much more relevant nowadays but we must understand it with a very broader vision. Let us join hands together not only to face the global competition (social, cultural, ethical, religious, economic and political) but also to enable ourselves to gain from the world and contribute to the global development, removing hunger and poverty from every nook and corner of the globe, proving Bharat's Philosophy of VASUDEVA KUTUMBHAM.

The basic aim of any research is to enable the masses to participate in the development process of the nation. The present issue of National Research Journal of Social Sciences (NRJSS) publishes empirical research papers for the benefit of the researchers, readers and the society as a whole.
